Heroic moves: Marvel's

'Echo' premieres deaf
Indigenous superhero in style

In recent years, the Marvel Cinematic Universe has become a massive blockbuster sensation. Fans of the superhero genre have long been divided into camps — DC versus Marvel, for instance — but those seeking any form of visual entertainment, from art to books to film and television, would be hard-pressed to find a medium that did not cater in some way to caped crusaders or leotard-clad superhumans.

That said, ever since The Walt Disney Company purchased Marvel Entertainment in 2009 (for a whopping $4 billion), the company's streamer, Disney+, has been one of the greatest proponents of the "super" genre. Newest to join the ranks is "Echo," the "Hawkeye" spinoff series premiering Wednesday, Jan. 10, on the platform.

While hardly new to the Marvel Universe, Echo is best known to current Marvel fans in the form of budding actress Alaqua Cox, who was born and raised in the Menominee Indian Reservation in Keshena, Wisconsin, and is of the Menominee and Mohican nation. Starring alongside Jeremy Renner ("The Hurt Locker," 2008) and Hailee Steinfeld ("Dickinson") in the 2021 miniseries "Hawkeye," Echo was introduced in a supporting role and garnered plenty of attention for her two-fold inclusivity and incredible fighting abilities. As is the case with nearly all superheroes and villains in the MCU, Echo's backstory is somewhat complicated and varies significantly between sources, but at least three things remain consistent: her name, her background and her deafness.

Born Maya Lopez, Echo is the highly gifted daughter of secret mob enforcer William Lopez (Zahn McClarnon, "Dark Winds") — sometimes referred to as William Lincoln in other related source material — a proud Native American man of the Cheyenne Nation, and a Latina mother, known vaguely as "Ms. Lopez," who abandoned the family when Maya was young. Upon his untimely death related to criminal activities, William urges hulking mobster Kingpin, a.k.a. Wilson Fisk (played in "Echo" by Vincent D'Onofrio of 1987's "Full Metal Jacket"), to look after his young daughter at all costs. Nothing if not a man of his word, Fisk agrees — and so begins Lopez's journey as Echo.

Per the Marvel website, the Disney+ series is Echo's origin story and "revisits Maya Lopez, whose ruthless behavior in New York City catches up with her in her hometown. She must face her past, reconnect with her Native American roots and embrace the meaning of family and community if she ever hopes to move forward."

By reconnecting with her hometown, her roots and her own morals and desires, Maya tries to let go of what no longer serves her and embrace the feelings that have been driving her down the same dangerous path as Kingpin and the father she lost during her childhood. Along the way, however, there is plenty of violence, bloodshed and "real consequences" (per Freeland) — hence the series' TV-MA rating.

Behind the scenes, Navajo filmmaker Sydney Freeland ("Reservation Dogs") and Australian/Gunaikurnai creative Catriona McKenzie ("Satellite Boy," 2012) direct the series. Naturally, Freeland and McKenzie were excited to begin work on a project focused on the only deaf Indigenous superhero in entertainment media. Beyond that, the official trailer for "Echo" also prominently features the hero's prosthetic leg, an addition to the original source material to provide added inclusivity and incorporate Alaqua's own, real-life prosthetic into the storyline.

"Representation was extremely important to myself and to everyone on the crew," Freeland stated at an October 2023 news conference.

But neither Alaqua's amputee status nor the character's deafness was front and center while plotting the show's details. Sure, the creators gave thought to her disabilities and incorporated them into the storyline, but her so-called "disabilities" — as "Hawkeye" fans have clearly already noticed — are hardly disabling. Instead, creators laid much of the focus on the toll anger, resentment and physical trauma can take on a human being as they interact with the oft-cruel world around them.

At the end of the day, Freeland noted, "Echo" is "an exploration of trauma — how we deal with it, how we cope with it, how it affects us, how we affect it, how it affects those around us."

Tastemaker trials: Food Network stars battle in winnertakes-all competition

The only thing tastier than a delicious meal is a good grudge. An all-new episode of "Superchef Grudge Match" airs Tuesday, Jan. 9, on Food Network.

Host Darnell "Superchef" Ferguson ("Tournament of Champions") hosts this competition of culinary fisticuffs, as Ferguson invites chefs from across America to settle personal and professional disputes with their foes in a one-round, one-dish, winner-take-all heavyweight battle.

As Food Network describes: "the food world is filled with bold, brash chefs with egos as big as their resumes, so it is only natural that when chefs collide, beef can turn into bad blood. Darnell invites two pairings of chefs who have some kind of food feud to bring their knives and bury the hatchet once and for all. In the end, the two Grudge Match victors walk out with a $10,000 cash prize, a prized knife from the losing chef's knife roll and bragging rights for life!"

Throughout this second season, Ferguson has invited some highly talented Food Network alumni to take part in his challenge, with upcoming episodes seeing the likes of Jay Ducote ("Food Network Star"), Joe Sasto ("The Great Food Truck Race") and many others enter into the ring. More exciting names are still to come, however, with new episodes rolling out weekly and Food Network promising appearances from chefs Aarti Sequeira ("Aarti Party"), Brian Malarkey ("Beachside Brawl") and Antonia Lofaso ("Top Chef"), along with food critic Troy Johnson ("The Best Thing I Ever Ate").

During this season's finale episode, for example: "longtime rivals compete in two epic all-star battles for the favor of judges Eric Adjepong ["The Great Soul Food Cook-Off"] and Stephanie Izard ["Top Chef"]," Food Network shares. "In the first match, chef Nate Appleman ["The Next Iron Chef"] takes on chef Amanda Freitag ["Chopped"] to show the world that he's ready to join the elite corps of chefs who compete on 'Tournament of Champions'. In the second match, there's old beef to settle when chef Jonathon Sawyer ["Beat Bobby Flay"] challenges chef Chris Cosentino ["Food Interrupted"] for the title of America's Meat Master."

Packed with talent and good taste, new episodes of "Superchef Grudge Match" air Tuesday, Jan. 9, on Food Network.

BEST PRIME TIME CARTOONS

"The Flintstones" (ABC, 1960-66): Fox's "Grimsburg" joins the category when it premieres Sunday, Jan. 7, but this was the first animated series made specifically for evening television. The Hanna-Barbera classic succeeded largely because it offered something for everyone, including the appealing animation of the prehistoric characters for youngsters, and the smart parallels drawn between past and modern times for adults.

"The Jetsons" (ABC, 1962-63): It only made sense, if Hanna-Barbera had success in delving into the past, for the studio to follow up by taking the concept into the future. Instead of Fred Flintstone, George Jetson was the hapless head of the household, relying on Rosie the Robot and pet dog Astro to help him through life. "Jonny Quest" (ABC, 1964-65):

"Jonny Quest" (ABC, 1964-65):
Hanna-Barbera took a more realistic approach to adapting Doug Wildey's comic about adventurous youngster Jonny (voice of Tim Matheson), his scientist father and their comrades in danger.

"The Simpsons" (Fox, 1989-present): Animation hadn't been a part of prime time for some time when Homer, Bart and the rest of Matt Groening's Springfield-based characters — originally seen in short subjects on "The Tracey Ullman Show" — were spun off into their own series that continues to run strong all these years later, often with big-name voice guests.

"The Critic" (ABC, 1994; Fox, 1995): The world of a movie reviewer (voice by Jon Lovitz) supplied the frame (voice by Jon Lovitz) supplied the framework for this comedy, which frequently incorporated parodies of popular or famous films into the episodes.

"South Park" (Comedy Central, 1997-present): Kenny has survived countless killings to stay with one of television's most proudly irreverent shows.

"Futurama" (Fox, 1999-2003):
Wanting more from "Simpsons" mentor

of a modern man defrosted in the future,

Q: Will "Yellowstone" repeats continue to be shown on CBS? – Bill Meredith, via e-mail

'Yellowstone' and CBS: Is that marriage about to be over?

A: With the network ready to present its originally intended Sunday lineup starting in February, following the entertainment-industry strikes that shut down much production, the reruns of the Kevin Costner-starring Paramount Network drama series will be suspended by CBS after its Season 3 runs later this month.

It's likely not being ignored, nor will be forgotten, how well "Yellowstone" has performed ratings-wise for CBS at a time when it was needed to fill slots in the broadcast network's schedule. Thus, we wouldn't be surprised to see CBS call the show back into action at some future point, perhaps in summer. Clearly, the numbers suggest that many viewers discovered the program anew during its CBS engagement, so there will be one-and-a-half existing seasons they haven't seen yet if they didn't watch the series in its original home.

Q: I've seen a lot of James Bond movies on TV lately. Which actor starred the most times as Bond? – Greg Carmody, Toledo, Ohio

A: If you're counting only the "official" Bond adventures that were made by producers Albert R. Broccoli and Harry Saltzman (and only by Broccoli, eventually), Roger Moore had the most turns as Agent 007 with seven examples, from "Live and Let Die" (1973) through "A View to a Kill" (1985). The movies' first Bond, Sean Connery, comes in second with six of the films ... unless you count the "unofficial" entry "Never Say Never Again" (1983), which was made by different producers who had gotten the rights to remake 1965's "Thunderball." If you do count that one, Connery ties Moore by also having seven projects as the British secret agent. As for other Bonds, George Lazenby played the part once, Timothy Dalton twice, and most recent occupant Daniel Craig five times.

Two of my friends recommended Creeks to me and I'm so glad they did. The estimator was friendly, open and honest and gave several options and the installers were courteous, on time and cleaned up the working area. Plus, the system works great.
