Space based: Celebrities compete in simulated Mars mission

Ever since Amazon magnate Jeff Bezos' trip into space last year, there has been plenty of speculation about the rise of space tourism and which celebrities would be among the first to achieve liftoff. Well, for those wondering what it might look like to take things a step further and host a star-studded reality show in space, Fox has got you covered. The new series, "Stars on Mars," premieres Monday, June 5.

Equal parts Bravo and Star Trek, "Stars on Mars" is hosted by Capt. Kirk himself, William Shatner ("Star Trek: The Original Series"). While not actually filmed in outer space (give that a few more years yet), the unscripted series follows a group of celebrities who must spend an entire summer on a simulated, Mars-like planet together. Constantly assigned tasks by mission control (Shatner, of course), each famous person will need to compete in a series of challenges with the aim of "colonizing" their out-of-this-world surroundings.

There is a good mix of skills among the 12-person crew, including actors, athletes, public figures and philanthropists. Actors Ariel Winter ("Modern Family"), Tallulah Willis ("The Whole Ten Yards," 2004) and Christopher Mintz-Plasse ("Superbad," 2007), for example, will be joined by reality TV stars Porsha Williams Guobadia ("The Real Housewives of Atlanta") and Tom Schwartz ("Vanderpump Rules"), as well as singer/songwriter Tinashe (known for "2 On," featuring ScHoolboy Q). Meanwhile, rounding out the more athletic side are Tour de France multi-champion Lance Armstrong, UFC champion Ronda Rousey, former Seattle Seahawk Marshawn Lynch, former NFL cornerback Richard Sherman and Olympic figure skater Adam Rippon. Comedian Natasha Leggero ("Another Period") joins from a category of her very own.

In a news release, Fox executives laid out their hopes for the celebs on their "Martian" mission: "During their stay, they will be faced with authentic conditions that simulate life on Mars, and they must use their brains and brawn — or maybe just their stellar social skills — to outlast the competition and claim the title of 'brightest star in the galaxy.'"

This "analog mission," as NASA typically refers to these types of simulations, is filmed in the South Australian town of Coober Pedy, a red-sanded desert town nearly 850 kilometres north of Adelaide that is famous for its opals. And while each celebronaut voted "off the planet" during the competition does still need to return to the United States, there remains the small consolation that the flight home isn't quite as long as that from actual Mars.

Don't miss the launch of Shatner and crew's next mission as "Stars on Mars" begins Monday, June 5, on Fox.

Hit the pit: Pitmasters face off in Netflix competition

This summer, the stakes (and the steaks) are hotter than ever, as this fan-favorite cooking competition heads outside to hit the pit – the barbecue pit, that is – for Season 2 of "Barbecue Showdown," now available to stream on Netflix.

Just in time for grilling season, hosts Lyric Lewis ("A.P. Bio") and Rutledge Wood ("Lost in Transmission") return to the showdown's outdoor stage, inviting eight new chefs to compete for the title of American Barbecue Champion, in what Netflix calls a "fierce but friendly faceoff" between some of barbecue's very best.

The competing backyard barbecue enthusiasts, smoking connoisseurs and pitmasters range in specialty and experience level but share one thing in common: they all practise the art of "manning the grill," with skills honed sharper than a boning knife.

Challenges cover a variety of different cooking styles, forcing the chefs out of their comfort zones as temperatures rise in more ways than one. Adding pressure to the cookers, each task must be completed within a time frame that slices into the normal amount of time required to prepare and cook each given dish. There are also "surprise challenges," interrupting the ever-present need for chefs to maintain their ideal grill temperature, a job necessary to produce an evenly smoked and evenly textured slab of meat.

The completed dishes are then presented to a panel of celebrity chef judges, including barbecue restaurateur Kevin "Big Kev" Bludso ("Diners, Drive-ins and Dives") and seven-time barbecue champion Melissa Cookston ("Food Paradise"). Each episode, one chef is named "Star Pitmaster" by the judges, while another is eliminated from the game, narrowing the competition until only two remain for a flaming-hot grill-off featured in the finale.

Last season saw competitors cooking meals for 50 ravenous firefighters — choosing between exotic proteins in a dish featuring either iguana, raccoon or hare meat and creating epic, one-of-a-kind signature sandwiches. This second season features more unique challenges (and just as satisfying a winner), having been released just in time for the barbecue season on Sunday, May 28.

For a mouth-watering taste of well-done competition, both seasons of "Barbecue Showdown" are now available to stream on Netflix.

BEST JUDY GARLAND MOVIES

"The Wizard of Oz" (1939): You can't do this list without this film. When 20th Century Fox wouldn't loan out Shirley Temple to play Dorothy, MGM called in its contract player Garland – and the rest is history, very literally. The fanciful fantasy remains a favorite of every generation, including newer ones.

"Babes on Broadway" (1941):
"Hey, let's put on a show!" That line was the basis for many a musical that Garland made with close friend Mickey Rooney, including this one about a charity show that their characters mount.

"For Me and My Gal" (1942): A teaming of Garland and Gene Kelly only can be sensational, and this one is, as they play performing partners who might become more than that to each other.

"Meet Me in St. Louis" (1944): The title city is the setting – at least initially – for this classic musical about a family about to relocate to New York because of the patriarch's new job. Garland and Margaret O'Brien's adorable crooning of "Under the Bamboo Tree" is worth the figurative price of admission on its own.

"The Harvey Girls" (1946): A new restaurant's location prompts a train journey for Garland's character and others in another great MGM musical. "On the Atchison, Topeka and the Santa Fe" is a show-stopping number here.

"Easter Parade" (1948): The music of Irving Berlin is the engine that drives this picture ... which naturally tends to resurface every April. Garland, Fred Astaire and Ann Miller star as entertainers, and entertaining, they certainly are.

"In the Good Old Summertime" (1949): A story that has serviced a number of movies – the one about two people who don't get along face-to-face, but are each other's secret pen pal – works in a very big way for Garland and Van Johnson here. Also seen in the last scene: a very young Liza Minnelli (Garland's daughter, of course).

high-rated for Fox, the cost of making it has become that much higher as it approaches its seventh season, which diminishes the financial returns from it. As is commonly known, revenue for broadcasters has lessened in the streaming era, placing the price of a making a series (no matter how successful it is) under that much more scrutiny.

Also, Fox doesn't own the show in the case of "9-1-1," but ABC corporate cousin Disney does (via its 20th Television brand), signaling a synergy that gives the latter companies a vested interest in keeping the series going. Interestingly, Fox is continuing the spinoff "9-1-1: Lone Star," but the financial aspects are different for that program with it being newer.

Q: What was the last project Mary

Tyler Moore did? – Janet Evers, Wichita, Kan.

A: Her final acting role was a recurring spot on the TV Land sitcom "Hot in Cleveland" that reunited her with her former "Mary Tyler Moore Show" colleague Betty White. In fact, her last episode of that series also included "MTM" alums Valerie Harper, Cloris Leachman and Georgia Engel ... and the story's subtitle was "Love Is All Around," an obvious nod to the "MTM" theme song. Moore's career as a whole is being traced currently in "Being Mary Tyler Moore," an HBO documentary.

Q: There seemed to be a lot of television coverage of the Met Gala this year. Why? — Julie Shaw, via e-mail

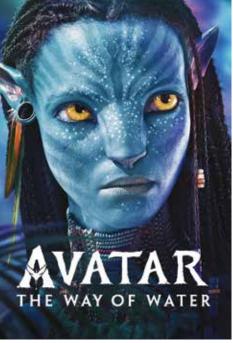

A: Celebrities! Outfits! A long red carpet! In a very real way, the annual New York festival of stars and fashion seems like a made- for-TV event, though it hasn't always gotten the degree of home-screen attention that it did this last time. E! went all in with a "Live From the Red Carpet" special, and just about all of the next night's "Entertainment Tonight" was devoted to the Met Gala, which paid tribute to the late designer Karl Lagerfeld with its latest edition.

"The First Alaskans - Season 2"

Set in the United States' most northern state, this National Geographic reality series sends camera crew to remote communities to chronicle the troubles faced by Indigenous Alaskans. While the weather is cold more often than not, the Alaskans are generally prepared for this type of hurdle. What they are less prepared to handle stems from shifts in the natural environment and political landscape. As they provide for themselves and their families today, many of these native Alaskans are worried about how they will provide for future generations, especially when taking global warming, gentrification, industrial expansion and shifting politics into consideration.
