Rocking reflections: Paramount+ revisits Elvis Presley's 1968 comeback special

Elvis Presley's legendary 1968 television special was a turning point not only for him, but for many of the other people involved in it.

One was producer-director Steve Binder, who candidly told the "King" of music that the latter's career was "in the toilet," so he needed to do the NBC-televised hour. The result quickly became a legendary piece of television, and Paramount+ looks back at it in the new offering "Reinventing Elvis: The '68 Comeback," which starts streaming Tuesday, Aug, 15 — the night before the 46th anniversary of Presley's death, and following the project's limited showings in movie theaters globally.

While incorporating many segments from the original show, "Reinventing Elvis" examines Presley's relationship not only with Binder (who narrates the bulk of the film), but also with Col. Tom Parker, the famously strict manager who kept tight control over Presley. Singers Darius Rucker and Drake Milligan are among those who offer comments, along with journalist Alanna Nash and Anita Mann, who was a dancer on the 1968 special.

Also an executive producer of "Reinventing Elvis," Binder maintains that he's "real pleased with what they did" creatively with the documentary, though he admits he was skeptical at first. "When I was approached to get involved, I said, 'There are so many third-party stories about Elvis, why do we need another one?' Then they pitched me their idea, and it really covered 1968 as a whole. I was rooting for them from the sidelines, and I certainly was responsive to any of their requests for more material."

Music-documentary veteran John Scheinfeld — who also has done projects on John Lennon, John Coltrane, Herb Alpert and Harry Nilsson — directed "Reinventing Elvis," which also has music-industry legend Spencer Proffer, a longtime Binder associate, as the executive producer who conceived it. "There are so few of us alive today who were there when it all happened," Binder reflects of the 1968 Elvis show. "There have been specials and books about it, but I never felt that anybody who was there told the real story.

"I was there from the beginning to the end, and it's so gratifying today to realize what the public response to it was. A number of years ago, somebody approached me and said, 'Steve, you realize that no matter what you did in the past or do from here on in, you'll be remembered mostly for the Elvis comeback special' ... and I think they told the truth."

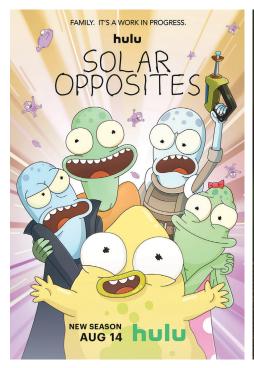

The entirety of "Reinventing Elvis" serves as a reminder of how major a star Presley was in his time. "We're so lucky that we partnered with Paramount+," Binder notes, "because many of Elvis' movies were done at Paramount, so we were given access to their library and were able to include clips from his films. That was just a stroke of luck, and it sure adds to this. None of the other projects that have been done about the 1968 special were able to clear those rights, I guess."

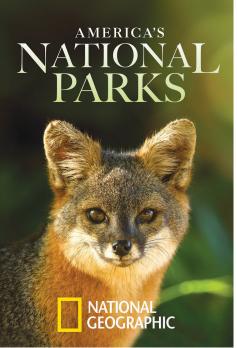

For Binder, "Reinventing Elvis" has a personal significance that goes beyond his literally having called the shots on the classic special. "I have nine grandkids and a great-grandchild," he reports, "and the fact that they're able to relive this with me now while I'm here is such a bonus and such a pleasure. And it just looks so fresh, even to me, which is very rare when you look back at an old show."

'GGG' returns with biggest names in culinary

Guy Fieri wines, dines and runs the aisles with the best of the best when the five-week, five-episode tournament "Guy's Grocery Games: All-Star Invitational" begins Wednesday, Aug. 16, on Food Network.

This time, the "GGG" competition we all know and love will feature only the biggest names in the culinary industry, as renowned celebrity chefs Karen Akunowicz, Nate Appleman, Jose Garces, Ilan Hall, Stephanie Izard, Mei Lin, Shota Nakajima and Jonathon Sawyer each take to the kitchen in order to compete for the winning "GGG" trophy and the $75,000 cash grand prize.

"Each week the chefs go head-to-head to see whose shopping and cooking skills are a cut above the rest," Food Network shared in a recent news release. "They must navigate their way through the grocery aisles as they are tested in challenges from 'Express Lane,' where they must create a signature sandwich and side using only eight ingredients, to 'Budget Battle,' where they must make an impressive weeknight dinner for four with only $25, to 'Frozen Food Feud,' where they must make a dish only using frozen ingredients, and many more."

"Ultimately," the network explains, "the food does the talking, as a rotating panel of judges determines who checks out of the competition."

The tournament begins as Fieri welcomes his eight competing all-stars to the ring, each equally impressive, with ranks including Iron Chefs, James Beard recipients, and "Top Chef" and "Tournament of Champion" winners. Most importantly, each cook shares one thing in common: they have never stepped foot inside the infamous Flavortown Market before. No matter their history, each competitor is totally new to the world of "GGG."

"Now, Guy will put them through a gauntlet of diabolical games," Food Network shared, "starting with the ultimate limited ingredient game, 'Express Lane,' as chefs make their signature sandwich and a side using only eight ingredients. The chef awarded best dish wins an automatic $10,000, while the others are vulnerable to a surprise twist!"

Later in the release, Fieri commented: "These culinary rock stars have more awards and accolades than you can count, but let me tell you, they've never experienced the heart-pounding intensity of Flavortown Market before. They're itching to prove they're the true masters of flavor, and I've got a few tricks up my sleeve to see if they're the real deal!"

Q: Are this summer's episodes of "The $100,000 Pyramid" new? I saw one with Lindsey Vonn that I thought I had seen before. - Gary Andrews, Lancaster, Pa.

A: Most of them are new, but there's been a mix ... and yes, that Lindsey Vonn episode seems very familiar sometimes aired a couple of times earlier. The ABC game show hosted by Michael Strahan is running new episodes on Sundays, and if repeats show up, those generally are on other nights such as Wednesdays. The same thing happened with an encore installment that featured Sara Haines of "The View" and "The Chase," who had been a co-host of the weekday "GMA3" with Strahan before that show changed format during the coronavirus pandemic.

Part of the gift of game shows such as "The $100,000 Pyramid" is that they are so repeatable, which is why they've also become staples of Game Show Network. And certain celebrity players return from season to season - Cedric the Entertainer and RuPaul Charles are among those who have played multiple times - so it sometimes can be confusing as to whether an ABC broadcast of the game is a repeat or not.

Why 'The $100,000 Pyramid'

Q: I was interested in the Rock Hudson documentary on HBO. I know it mentioned that he had done "McMillan and Wife," and there were clips from his time on "Dynasty," but didn't he do another television series as well? – Len Case, via e-mail

A: The actor also starred in the NBC mystery "The Devlin Connection" in the fall of 1982, a year after it had been scheduled to debut

(Hudson needed to recover from emergency heart bypass surgery). The show didn't last long, though, being canceled after 13 episodes. Hudson also starred in a couple of limited series
- or "miniseries," which was the more popular term at that time - the first of which was a 1978 adaptation of the Arthur Hailey auto-industry novel "Wheels," which the recent HBO documentary referenced. A couple, of years after that, Hudson made a TV version of author Ray Bradbury's "The Martian Chronicles," in which he played a character named John Wilder ... which also happened to be the name of the executive producer of "The Devlin Connection."
